

Funds Held in a Custodial IRA Account at the IRA Club are FDIC Insured

FDIC Insured at the IRA
Club

- The IRA Club maintains clients' IRA funds in FDIC insured accounts.
- IRA funds are segregated from non-IRA funds.
- The owner of the funds in the segregated account is the IRA account (Generally listed as IRA Club F/B/O [your name], IRA Account #).
- It is the owner of the IRA (referred to as the principle) who enjoys the protection provided by the FDIC insurance.

Should you or your counsel wish to review the FDIC sections relating to this matter, please see FDIC Section 330, with emphasis on §330.5

Notes:

1. The FDIC insurance does not extend to the investment made by the IRA and covers only the cash held in an FDIC insured account.
2. Current FDIC limits and regulations (as amended) apply. Additional coverage {beyond $250,000} is available for a small fee.
